

My Study Abroad Experience in England

I had an amazing study abroad experience, especially since it was my first time ever leaving the country. I studied at The University of Nottingham, England and took elective courses to supplement my majors. While abroad I got the chance to travel to other places in England and Europe. This was the perfect chance for me to not only explore a whole new continent and society but to also find out more about myself through a new aspect of independence. Something I would stress about studying abroad is doing your research. There are many cheap ways to travel once abroad and there are many cool new things to see and learn about as well. If you can, I recommend you study abroad. It's such a good learning experience and a great way for people to truly discover new things and more about who you are as a person.
